The Art of Living Your Dreams

Mike Dooley

A promotional magazine inspired by the Atria/Beyond Words title Infinite Possibilities. Sept 2009 978-1-58270-226-1, $25.00, Hardcover
As the publisher of many of what we hope are your favorite Mind, Body, and Spirit titles, I am very pleased to share bestselling author Mike Dooley's newest work. It's a fresh look at spirituality and who we really are—illuminating all we can truly be, do, and have—and includes practical tips for realizing your wildest dreams.

Infinite Possibilities is Mike Dooley's manifesto; he enlightens us that our dreams are not accidental, but serve as invitations to understand the truth about ourselves, hinting at the lives we can create. Dooley explains that our “default settings” are abundance, health, and harmony, and that once we grasp the truth about our potential, it becomes evident that life itself is the ultimate adventure. Day by day, we’re given unending opportunities that lead us to rediscover how powerful we are, how much we deserve, and why we’re here.

With recognizable insight, lighthearted wit, and striking sincerity, this new work by a much-celebrated author elevates the lessons learned from Dooley’s wisdom in The Secret, Choose them Wisely, and his Notes from the Universe trilogy to a whole new level, and includes practical ideas for “thriving in the jungles of time and space.”

Prepare to be challenged and excited by this unique guide to living the life of your dreams purposefully, lovingly, and brilliantly.

With regards and, always, my best,

WHAT ARE YOUR FAVORITE BOOKS?
Although raised a church-going Catholic, I found many of the teachings, rules, and rituals contradictory, and more importantly, inconsistent with the spiritual answers I had intuitively arrived at. I’ve always needed explanations that made sense, and just as importantly, I’ve always believed these answers were attainable. Without realizing it at the time, my blazing desire to “know” was my key to unraveling the mysteries of the Universe; my questions were slowly answering themselves, opening my eyes to the truths I now realize are latent within all of us.

By the time I was twenty, I had deduced that we’re not here accidentally nor are we set adrift by some angry God who will judge, condemn, and sentence us. I also learned that, through focusing my thoughts, I summoned powers beyond our normal awareness that enabled my dreams, and nightmares, to come true. I discovered that spirituality can exist without religion, that God lives within us all, and that we are here of our own choosing to live lives filled with both adventure and challenge. After a six year international stint with PriceWaterhouseCoopers, these were the kinds of thoughts my mother, brother, and I began putting on T-shirts back in the, 90s, eventually selling over one million of them. But as the year 2000 dawned, with both our sales and enthusiasm waning, we decided to close the last of our stores and I began writing full time.

I started Infinite Possibilities on January 1, 2001, as the script for the audio program that would become the genesis of this book. I was both scared and excited—forty years old and embarking on my third career—but I knew a few things about manifesting wishes into reality, of our divinity and power, of holding to a dream and physically moving with it.

Since then, Infinite Possibilities has gone on to become one of the bestselling audio programs in the self-improvement world, and I’ve spoken to audiences in twenty countries, and was featured in the mega-blockbuster, The Secret. What I discovered, yet again, was that remembering my true place in life—understanding my role in its creation and demonstrating these understandings through thought, word, and deed—was, in itself, enough to change everything. Infinite Possibilities serves as a reminder of these principles, a reminder of our divine nature and limitless capabilities. It teaches the lessons that I, most needed to relearn and that the world is now ready to hear:

• WE ARE THE EYES AND THE EARS OF THE DIVINE, PEERING INTO A WORLD OF OUR OWN CREATION.

• WE ALONE HAVE THE POWER AND THE RESPONSIBILITY TO SHAPE OUR FORTUNES AND FIND HAPPINESS.

• WE HAVE OUR DREAMS FOR MANY REASONS, NOT THE LEAST OF WHICH IS TO MAKE THEM COME TRUE.

This book reveals our true spiritual nature and exactly what it takes to find happiness and fulfillment during the metamorphosis of consciousness that’s now taking place on our planet. The old is giving way to the new. Naivety is giving way to truth. Spirituality is about to take on an entirely new meaning. And there could be no better time, than at this crossroads in history, to learn the truth about who we really are and all we’re capable of doing, being, and having.

—Mike Dooley
What were you focused on when your T-shirt company wound down and you moved into speaking and writing? Can you give me the connecting next step so I can get to the “happy ending” correctly?

I visualized/defined the end result: fun creative work, wealth, and abundance, pie in the sky kind of stuff. Then I rolled up my sleeves and did all I could, with what I had, from where I was, even though most of it seemed pathetically simple compared to my dreams. The trick is not seeing these baby steps as how your dreams will come true. They aren’t supposed to create the home run of your life; they are simply pitches to the Universe, and you never know which of your pitches will be whacked out of the park, which is why you keep doing all the little stuff.

For me, my brain wanted to say, “yeah, a million dollar home...how is joining toastmasters going to get you that?” Yet, I did it anyway. “How are free daily emails going to add up to anything?” Yet, I did ‘em anyway. These were all we had, and to improve the situation and enhance chances of the Universe coming to my aid, I kept knocking on doors and turning over stones. I learned about NSA, went to their meetings, met people, asked questions, asked for help, asked for direction (from people, not the Universe), and almost imperceptibly connections were made and wheels began turning.

I feel as if I have no intuition, no instincts that come from within me. Oftentimes, I feel as if I don’t know how to act, and I can’t even find interest in things anymore. Is there any way to obtain intuition? Or reveal it? I’m so lost. And I don’t seem to “want” anything.

I would suggest that you stop trying to figure things out and just live one day at a time. Perhaps find a simple job and learn to love being creative in the moment, whether it is waiting tables in a restaurant, manual labor, or working in a library. There is joy everywhere; look for it and soak it in silently. Don’t expect enlightenment in a thunderclap; don’t even think about it. Just enjoy the simple things, and as you apply yourself to whatever is before you, you will begin feeling direction, impulses, and ideas.

What are your TOP 10 TIPS on feeling good (alignment/happiness) in life?

1. DO WHAT YOU LOVE.
2. VISUALIZE END RESULTS.
3. DON’T WORRY ABOUT “THE CURSED HOWS.”
4. KEEP BUSY.
5. BE SOCIAL; GET OUT MORE.
6. THINK FOR YOURSELF.
7. HONOR YOUR PREFERENCES.
8. GO FOR WALKS.
9. GIVE BIG TIPS.
10. NEVER BUY CHEAP GARDEN HOSES.

In The Secret, you say, “Thoughts become things!” Is there a process to reinforce the thoughts that we want to become things, and what do we do to eliminate the thoughts that we do not want to manifest?

There is no process. The best way to incorporate this principle into one’s life is by first grasping that it is truly a principle, exactly as gravity is. It’s not just about positive thinking, it’s not a “sometimes” process, it’s not merely a way to influence events and circumstances; in my view, it’s the end all and be all of living in time and space. With this kind of realization, one immediately senses their true power to manifest life-changes, which serves as the best possible motivation for attempting to work with our thoughts. This also answers the second part of your question, because as we come to learn of our immense power, so too do we realize our immense responsibility to think the thoughts that serve us and to no longer indulge in negative, unproductive thinking.

What do you do when you discover that all of your dreams are unrealistic and unsupported and you can’t pay your rent or your bills and it’s time to give it all up...except that practically everyone you know looks up to you as an example of someone who has followed their dreams?!

Sounds like fishy beliefs...“unrealistic and unsupported.” Next, you’ll tell me that life is hard, people are mean, and money doesn’t grow on trees. You just have to dust yourself off, pick yourself up, and have back at it! And if it means that you have to take a day job, or bus some tables, or pull some weeds, then no harm done! Whistle while you work, and keep on dreaming because your dreams are meant to be! I hope you feel better, because there’s a reason people look up to you. You are needed, no matter what you do with the hours of your day.
Whether it’s abundance, health, or harmony we’re after, our obsession with the hows in life is what gets us into trouble. To demonstrate this, let’s move this talk back toward material abundance (even though the same concepts apply to health and harmony), and I’ll give you a little test. Let’s say that you’re dreaming really, really big about whatever it is that you really, really want to manifest into your life. Go ahead and pick something outrageous right now that you’d like to experience or have.

If you’re like the rest of us, you’ll initially feel that in order to manifest what you’ve just thought you wanted, you’re going to have to figure out how to get it. If you’re a realtor, you’re already thinking about what kind of listings you’re going to have to get; if you’re an author, you’re already thinking about the bestsellers you’re going to have to write; if you’re a salesperson, you’re already thinking in terms of commissions and bonuses; and if you feel you’re currently stuck in a dead-end job or if you’re unemployed, you’re probably feeling stressed out because you have no idea what the heck you’re going to have to do to be able to afford your grandiose dreams.

So, without messing with the cursed hows, what do you have to do to get this thing you want? This is the test. What will you have to do to achieve this dream? No matter what your profession, or whether you lack one, I hope you just thought, “I’ll have to engage the invisible forces of the Universe to do this for me,” knowing full well that whatever you dream of is a cinch for the Universe, just as it’s virtually impossible for the physical you. Often our first failing when dwelling on abundance, health, or harmony is immediately thinking and stressing that we’re going to have to figure out how to bring them into our life.

For whatever you want, rid yourself of any conception of how you’ll get it. Remember when, straight out of school, I thought I was going to get fired during my first three months working at PW? Well, once I realized I was making a bad situation worse with my negative thinking, I began visualizing every evening when I got home from work. And remember that I told you I didn’t know what to visualize, because as a bad auditor, I didn’t know what good auditors do (or I wouldn’t have been a bad auditor)? Well, that impasse was a blessing because it led me to focus on my desired end result: walking up and down the hallways of PW, beaming with joy.

Not knowing how else to get out of my position as a bad auditor prevented me from telling the Universe how to save me, which would have limited it from seeking the absolute highest and best solution. As it turned out, the solution was something I could never have plotted in a million years—being loaned to the tax department!

I focused exclusively on the end result—being happy at work—and that’s exactly what I got when I let the Universe figure out the hows, or the details, of its achievement. Had I insisted that I become a “good auditor,” it’s much less likely the Universe could have even used the tax department as my salvation, as my thoughts on becoming a better auditor would have kept me in the audit department!

I then went on to tell you that after I averted an early termination at PW, I began working on a little scrapbook to help me visualize all kinds of things I wanted in my life, including the places I wanted to go. Basically, that little scrapbook held photographs of my desired end results, not the means of their attainment. It held pictures of my dreamed-of lifestyle, which is the hidden trick to the power of this kind of tool: It immediately gets your thinking to the end result. I looked at these pictures and visualized for about ten months, when finally, after a short seven-day period, decisions were made that swept me off my feet and landed me in a Middle Eastern city I had never even heard of, much less dreamed of or visualized. As it turned out, that tour of duty in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, was perhaps the one thing that could have made my dreams come true... the fastest. It was how my dreamed-of lifestyle would be realized, yet it was far beyond anything I could have imagined happening. Not only that, but it was a how that was in keeping with my own adventurous nature, and a fantastic time was had.

YOU'RE NEVER THROWN INTO ANYTHING; YOU ONLY CREATE EXPERIENCES AND SITUATIONS OR AVAIL EXPERIENCES AND SITUATIONS BECAUSE YOU ARE READY TO FACE THE CONSEQUENCES AND SEE THINGS IN A NEW LIGHT.

By letting go of the hows, not only do you free up the Universe to figure out things for you (in ways that may leave you speechless), you also free yourself from all the fears, worries, and stress that go along with trying to manipulate time and space.

There’s another challenge that goes with trying to plot your course. As you stress about every little detail of your progress, you are slowly drawn out of the now and begin living in and worrying over the future. But if you turn the hows over to the Universe, you can begin enjoying the present. By delegating and leveraging the Universe, you not only ensure that tomorrow will turn out for your highest and best, but you free yourself up to begin enjoying all the wonders that life already holds for you. This applies to every area of your life, not just your career but also your health and the harmony of your affairs.

Don’t mess with the cursed hows.

You Can Do This

Now, let’s ratchet things up some, because you’re not reading all this to make your life a little bit better; you’re reading this so that you can get busy making your dreams come true, and at a minimum, that means living in abundance, health, and harmony. Depending on where you are now, it may seem like you have a long way to go, but realize that the actual distance you have to travel isn’t physical. The challenge you face lies in shifting your thinking and understanding. You want to go from thinking the kind of thoughts that have delivered you to this day to thinking the kind of thoughts you’d think once your dreams have already come true. And while they may be two entirely different classes of thought, they’re still just thoughts.

BY LETTING GO OF THE HOWS, NOT ONLY DO YOU FREE UP THE UNIVERSE TO FIGURE OUT THINGS FOR YOU BUT YOU ALSO FREE YOURSELF FROM ALL THE FEARS, WORRIES, AND STRESS THAT GO ALONG WITH TRYING TO MANIPULATE TIME AND SPACE.

So let’s talk about this new kind of thinking. Thinking is similar to any physical task we perform. We get used to doing it in certain ways; we have our comfort zones, our routines, and our habits. Yet right now, by reading this book, you’ve acknowledged that you’re ready for some changes, and the message I’ve been sharing is that any such changes must first take effect in thought. Although I’ve shared a variety of ways to approach this, I really want to help you move quickly and easily into thinking in some new directions. The following are five easy ways to begin thinking new thoughts, with an emphasis on what to think (as opposed to how to think).

A Palette of Thoughts

Create for yourself (and why not start today?) a huge palette of thoughts to dwell on. What I mean is that you can develop now, ahead of time, a list of thoughts to think in the near future when you visualize, when you run errands, when you daydream, whenever. Take some time now to creatively provide yourself with a palette of thoughts to choose from later on. Even though you’ll only visualize once or twice a day, no longer than five or ten minutes at a time, it will make everything simpler if you have a list of the many nuances of your dreamed of life.

For example, if you want to lose weight, instead of just visualizing yourself being thin from time to time, create lists now of the hundreds of positive ramifications that being thin will bring into your life. You might think of what it will be like shopping for new clothes or trying to decide what to do with all your old clothes that no longer fit. You might think of the reactions of old friends and the reactions of new friends when they learn of the changes you’ve made. Think of picking new goals that would only seem attainable or worthy of dreaming once you are already at your ideal weight; think of how going for a walk or exercising will be so much easier; or imagine helping and inspiring others to achieve as you have. Think of everything that will be positively different, because virtually everything will be!

Create this huge palette of thoughts now so that you have all this “thought ammunition” to bounce around your head in the days, weeks, and months ahead. In addition to making lists, you can enumerate these positive scenarios on alternating pages of your scrapbook. It's easy, and you can create this kind of palette for every dream you have.

For abundance, think of the “help” you're going to have to hire to run your affairs: the accountant, the lawyer, the nannies, the lawn care companies, the swimming pool people, and more. Think of how you'll find them. Think of how you'll interact with these people and perhaps their families. Think of what else you'll be doing with your time. Think of the kind of goals you'll be setting for yourself once you're financially set for life. Delve deeply into imagining your life and affairs under these new circumstances. Make these palettes so large that you always have things to think about, to wonder about, and to consider. They should be so large, and your thinking along these new lines should become so predominant, that, going forward, you won't even be able to watch television or drive past a billboard without considering the ads in the context of your new life.

Think BIG

As I mentioned lightly in the beginning of this book, think big, yet pace yourself. Beyond simply inspiring yourself, when you think big, your dreams send your thoughts beyond known limitations. By aiming high, it's like reaching above the clouds of doubt, because you have no idea what kind of limits may even exist way up there.

For me, the abstract thought of “living the life of my dreams” gives me far more inspiration and less resistance than focusing on just getting my next book published and distributed or on a new speaking opportunity because it shoots me past all my known arguments. And while the thought of living the life of my dreams is abstract, it's still easy to imagine lots of related details—hearing my friends' voices as they congratulate me, seeing the shine on the chrome of my new car, arranging the new furniture in my corner office, meeting with an architect to discuss renovating my London flat, feeling the sweat pouring off me after an excellent country run! What's important is that we not make these details more important than the big picture: living the life of our dreams.

Give Yourself Incremental Goals

Actually, there's nothing wrong with exclusively dwelling in the clouds of your wildest dreamed-of end results, but these visualizations may seem so far removed from your present life that you may find it hard to believe that you could ever really close the gap, and consequently, you could become overwhelmed. Break down your lofty goals into several bite-size pieces so that, from time to time, you can also work on more immediately manageable achievements, empowering yourself and building your confidence as you make progress toward your dreams. A word of caution, however: This is not to be misconstrued. I'm not suggesting you create incremental hows (e.g., “I'll write a bestseller so that I'll then be able to splurge on a family safari in Kenya!”). What I mean is that you should have some incremental end results; there's a big difference between the two (e.g., “My first book's first draft will be complete by the year's end! By summer, I will have an agent. It will be a book that thrills readers the world over!”). Or, entirely independent of your dream to become a writer, you'd imagine, “This year we'll vacation in Mexico! Next year we'll safari in Kenya!”

Of course, you can dream big and fast. The point I am making is not to make one dream bow another dream will come true. There's no reason you cannot dream of your first book becoming a bestseller; it happens all the time. But this example was purposefully “loaded,” because writing a bestselling book is a classic and common example of how many people see their other dreams coming true. The only reason one should aspire to write a book to begin with is either because they earnestly have something to share or because they love writing.

Happiness's Greatest Secret

To the best of your ability, enjoy your life as it already is. It's not the realization of your dreams that will bring you happiness; most people adjust their dreams as they go, raising the bar higher and higher, and so it should be. Ever hear of a millionaire who didn't strive for his or her second million? We're naturally insatiable creatures; reaching one goal, we immediately fix our sights on the next. These pursuits are adventures. They keep us growing and they keep us alive, which means that by perpetually changing our goals and dreams, the only constant in our lives is the journey we're on—a journey without end and one that is partly based upon attaining “things” we do not yet have. So the trick is learning to find happiness even while we do not yet have all you want, because you never will! Do you see? If we postpone our happiness until our present dreams come true, it becomes a habit without end—our achieved dreams constantly being replaced by new dreams. To enjoy life means to enjoy the journey even though the journey itself implies that we are incomplete. This is happiness's greatest secret; master it now and you can coast into “the rest of your life.”

Ground Yourself in Truth
Spend some time every now and then just dwelling on the fact that your natural state is abundance, health, and harmony (five to ten minutes is enough). Think on their nature and their pervasiveness in life itself. See life sending to you all that you want, because it does. Consider nature itself, with its peaceful sceneries and its prolific productions of greenery, flowers, and fruit. Reflect on how little the animals in the wild have to worry about their survival, food, and shelter. And recall every incident in your life in which you were miraculously provided for. Dwell on life's magic and strive for that certainty of knowing that you are perfect, you are loved, and all is well. This thinking will take you past limits you don't even know you have, and more and more it will enable you to begin seeing proof of life’s harmony and abundance all around you.

Water rises to its own level unless physically prevented from doing so, and your level includes an endless supply of rich abundance, perfect health, and blissful harmony. These elements are your birthright, and they belong in your life right now. You are special, you are divine, and you are oh-so-deserving. Life will carry you on—it already has—and to direct more abundance, health, and harmony your way only requires an understanding of the true nature of who you really are, where you are, and why you're here.

Can you see yourself living in the home of your dreams, owning fabulous cars, frolicking on a South Seas island or in the Caribbean in the winter, taking in Broadway shows in Manhattan, traveling internationally every year (first class, of course!), skiing the Swiss Alps, hiking in the Himalayas, joining safaris through the Masai Mara? How about sailing, scuba diving, playing tennis, golf, or polo—can you see those too? You could be staying at the Hermitage in Monte Carlo; attending Wimbledon, the Masters, or the Super Bowl; buying wonderful gifts for family and friends; financially helping those in need; incorporating your own charitable organizations; funding scholarship programs; feeding the hungry; housing the homeless. Can you see yourself living like this? I can.

Now imagine feeling good about your body, being fit and trim, working out, jogging, playing sports, sweating, and loving it. Can you envision yourself posing for pictures and loving the results (medicine-free, hospital-free, doctor-free, pain-free)? Never, ever having to think about your health when deciding upon future adventures, vacations, jobs, and travel while supporting others in their quest for a healthy life? Can you see yourself like this? I can.

Your life can be stress-free, when every day you feel satisfied with everything you did and didn’t do, always knowing that you've done enough and always feeling that you are exactly where you should be, breezing through your days with a powerful sense of grace, feeling your connection to the Universe, and appreciating that you really do have all the time in the world. Can you see yourself like this? I can, and so can the Universe.

TO ENJOY LIFE MEANS TO ENJOY THE JOURNEY EVEN THOUGH THE JOURNEY ITSELF IMPLIES THAT WE ARE INCOMPLETE.

You are a miracle, you are prone to succeed, and the cards are stacked in your favor. By embracing these simple truths, you'll unavoidably meet with the abundance, health, and harmony that is even now everywhere in your life.

Manifesting our dreams isn’t about hard work—it’s about belief, expectation, and above all, knowing the truth about our place in the universe. Mike Dooley’s manifesto, Infinite Possibilities, affirms that in our world of illusions, there is no finite allotment of whatever your heart desires, especially not happiness, and that experiencing more love and new possibilities is limited only by the scope of our ability to imagine and act upon each.

With stunning insights and striking sincerity, Dooley’s spiritual revelations illuminate the truth behind our desires, human nature, and “Divine Intelligence,” while providing a manual on how to bring what we most want into our lives.

“I am so excited about this book! Mike Dooley has given every human soul a great and wonderful gift. He shows us in the clearest terms yet just how to produce what God has always intended for us: a life of joy unbounded!”

—Neale Donald Walsch, author of When Everything Changes, Change Everything, and Conversations with God

“Having been a fan of the ‘big boys’—Anthony Robbins, Wayne Dyer, Earl Nightingale, et al.—I came away with the realization that Dooley is the most literate and professorial of them all.”

—Roger Yale, Los Angeles Entertainment Today

“Infinite Possibilities is the perfect book at the perfect time. It is full of wisdom, answers, and guidance—a unique combination that is guaranteed to help anyone during times of change and transition. I loved it!”

—Ariane de Bonvoisin, bestselling author of The First 30 Days

“This book is your ticket to living. After experiencing Infinite Possibilities, you will never see life from the same perspective.”

—James Van Praagh, author of Unfinished Business
Both a profound and playful investigation into the mysteries of the universe, Mike Dooley’s Infinite Possibilities is a manifesto affirming that there is no finite allotment of anything, especially happiness! From the bestselling author of Notes From the Universe.
